

COURT OVERRULES MOTION TO QUASH WHYNO INDICTMENT

Bristol Man Charged With Illegal Possession of Liquor

COURT, ELECTION DAY

Announcement is Made That Sessions Will Be Held On Tuesday, Sept. 17th

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 11.—The Court yesterday overruled a motion to quash the bill of indictment in the case of Frank Whyno, Bristol, charged with illegal possession of liquor.

Announcement was made that court will be held on Tuesday, September 17th, election day, the same as other days next week.

Bright T. Zeller, of Philadelphia, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, pleaded guilty before Judge Calvin S. Boyer and was sentenced to pay a fine of $200 and costs. Zeller was arrested at South Langhorne. He told the Court that he drank several glasses of beer at Asbury Park before starting home.

In the Quarter Sessions Court today, Judge Keller handed down an order refusing a new trial in the case of the Commonwealth against Betty Groover, charged with illegal possession of liquor, and directed the defendant to appear before the Court for sentence on Monday morning, September 16th.

Request Grangers To Vote Against Convention

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—Requesting all Grangers to vote “No” on the Constitutional Revision Convention proposal to come before the voters of Pennsylvania Tuesday, September 17, J. A. Boak, master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, expresses in a letter to them the belief that if a new Constitution is framed at this time it may lead to revolution in the future.

“If we permit ourselves to be misled by the will-of-the-wisps of the politicians and are foolish enough to give up our charter of liberties—the Constitution—our children and their children may be called upon to raise a Washington or a Lincoln to free us from the chains of slavery that will be forged by the liberal Constitution promised by those who want revision,” Mr. Boak says, and adds:

“Our ancestors, through their patriotism, paid dearly for our liberty and rights guaranteed us by the Constitution and we dare not barter it for a mess of pottage. The hidden mystery in the new Constitution is nothing but centralization of power in the Governor and the Legislature and a government machinery that will swarm with bureaucrats, both great and small.”

Boak says that revision of the Constitution at this time would result in huge increases in taxes. On the subject of “social security” he says that “Social security does not lie in laws, but rather within the homes and the people themselves. This nation has become great through initiative, enterprise and ambition; with the training of its young folks in homes of God-fearing fathers and mothers. Society, in general, is no better than its homes and neither dole nor law can take the place of the training afforded in the typical American home. The soul of our system of government is liberty. This cannot be maintained except through these rights as guaranteed in our present Constitution, which contains the sound fundamental principles of government.”

He urges the Granges to stand united against revision at this time.

WATERMELON PARTY

YARDLEY, Sept. 11.—Plans have been made under the direction of Vincent Casey, president, and Louis C. Leedom, chief, of Yardley Fire Company, No. 1, to entertain all the children in the Borough of Yardley at a watermelon party, on the lawn of the municipal building, Friday evening at eight o'clock. A large number of melons have been purchased, and all children of the town have been invited to enjoy the affair.

For Republican Nomination
DIRECTOR OF THE POOR
Bucks County

Jesse G. Webster, of Hulmeville, a candidate for the Republican nomination as Director of the Poor, of Bucks County, from the lower district, was born at Hulmeville, Bucks County, Pa., in the home which his grandfather, Jesse G. Webster, a farmer, had built and dwelt in. He is a descendant of an old pioneer family, members of which figured in the War for Independence, the Indian Wars, and the Civil War, of which latter conflict, his father, Hugh B. Webster, was a veteran. His emigrant ancestor was John Gilbert Webster, who came from England in 1683.

Mr. Webster was educated in the public schools, and at 17 graduated at the Old Hulmeville-Middletown High School. He then, following in the footsteps of his forebears, took up farming, successfully operating a farm and milk route. In 1918 he sold the farm and went into business, and has continued since in business for himself as a carpenter. He has always been a Republican and since casting his first vote has taken a keen interest in party affairs. At the request of his fellow townsfolk he served two terms as councilman in the Hulmeville Borough Council. His ability and experience thus gleaned in public life was augmented on May 27, 1935, when he was appointed by the Court a member of the Board of Directors of the Poor, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William P. Newbold, of Langhorne.

He has always taken an active interest in the civic affairs of his community, being a director and treasurer of the Hulmeville School Board; secretary of the Farmers’ Mutual Fire Insurance Company; a director of the Langhorne Building and Loan Association; and a member of Pomona Grange, No. 22; and a member of Middletown Grange.

Mr. Webster has the endorsement of the Republican Harmony Primary Campaign Committee.

REVISION ADVOCATES ARE NOT AGREEING

All is Not Harmony Among Forces Who Are Out For Constitutional Revision

MEANS A BIG EXPENSE

(Special to Courier)

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—With the Primary only a few days off, all is not harmony, but increasingly the reverse, among those who have staked their political fortunes upon Constitutional Revision—the current pet project of the Earle Administration.

The question of whether or not there shall be a Constitutional Convention, which it has been estimated would alone cost the tax-payers at least $650,000, will be put before the voters of all political parties on a special ballot in the forthcoming Primary Election. But up to a week or so ago there was little evidence of a particular public interest, one way or the other, and proponents of the proposal were counting confidently upon carrying by default.

It was no secret that the situation then existing gave especial satisfaction to Governor Earle and Attorney General Margiotti, both of whom grew up as Republicans but changed their politics in time to grab the juiciest political plums in Pennsylvania from under the noses of life-long Democrats, and who now are the leaders of the movement for a new Constitution which will enable them to clinch their control over the Democratic Party in the State, as well as over the borrowing power of the Commonwealth.

Up to that point there was not a fly in the harmony ointment.

Then the State Grange, followed by the Farm Bureau, which together represented practically the entire agricultural population of Pennsylvania, suddenly and aggressively marshalled their entire strength against the proposition, and began telling their members and the public at large what the proposal really contemplates, as revealed in earlier statements by the Governor, Margiotti, and those in their confidence.

The farm organizations have been joined by such representative business groups as the State Chamber of Commerce and local trade and commercial bodies in constantly increasing numbers.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS URGES CO-OPERATION OF SCHOOL BOARDS AND TEACHERS IN HEALTH MEASURES FOR PUPILS

More Responsibility Placed On Local Groups By State Dept.

KEEP YARDS CLEAN

State to Inspect Only 80 of 460 Fourth Class
Schools

With much of the responsibility of sanitary and medical inspection of the public schools placed upon the local school boards and also the county and local boards of health, the superintendent of Bucks County public schools, J. Harry Hoffman, is urging that directors and teachers throughout the county co-operate with the county medical director in every way possible. The county medical director is Dr. Claude L. Taylor.

A desire is expressed by Mr. Hoffman to have each school board see that the schools are in sanitary condition. He stressed the need of keeping school yards in good condition also.

“It would be a tribute to our directors, especially those of the rural schools, if the outside surroundings of the school buildings were made so attractive as to draw the attention of the public as they pass by,” said Mr. Hoffman.

In communication with Dr. Taylor, Mr. Hoffman pointed out that the County Medical Director would like each school board to arrange to have a committee of its members to inspect its school properties and report to the board its findings and recommendations for conditioning and repairing the properties.

It is further desired that these boards, upon receiving the committee’s reports, send copies to the County Superintendent’s office and to Dr. Taylor. Final reports should be made when the work is completed.

Under the present plan only 80 of the 460 fourth class schools will receive inspection this school year by one of the State medical school inspectors. It is evident, therefore, that the responsibility for inspection of a large part of the schools will rest upon the school boards.

The new plan for school medical inspection follows:

The examination of the first and second grade pupils in boroughs and consolidated schools.

The examination of first grade pupils of the rural schools if assembled in groups of thirty or more at one point.

The examination of the physically or mentally handicapped children of the upper grades when requested to do so by the teacher.

These examinations pertain to fourth class school districts only.

Supper will be served, at seven o’clock and following that there will be an election of officers of the club. All members are urged to attend.

Arrested in Philadelphia on Charge of Stealing $235

Pasquale Annacone, 34, having no particular place of residence, was held in $1,000 bail for court, last night, after a hearing before Justice of Peace James Laughlin, at Crofton.

Annacone was arrested yesterday in Philadelphia by Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo. Russo had gone to Philadelphia in search of Annacone, who it was said was in the vicinity of Vine street at a shoe shining stand. The man wanted was not to be found when Russo visited the place, but in walking along the street Russo saw him step from a barber’s chair.

Annacone, it is stated, visited his mother at the King farms near Morrisville on July 17th, remaining until August 20th. During his visit he occupied the same room as Emilio Pacitti and is accused of breaking into Pacitti’s trunk and taking $235.

The Methodist Harvest Home supper will be held in the lecture room of the church Thursday night from five to eight o’clock.

For Republican Nomination
DIRECTOR OF THE POOR
Bucks County

The satisfaction which has accrued to the citizens of Bucks County in the upright administration of the office of Poor Director should be of itself a real reason for the re-nomination of Minerva F. Martin for Poor Director on the Republican ticket at the Primary Election. While giving her best and experienced efforts in helping and heartening our less fortunate citizens in time of need and want, she managed, despite many urging appeals to her sympathies, to always have observed a due and laudable and loyal regard for an economic disbursement of the taxpayers’ funds.

That Minerva F. Martin, a native of Bucks County and who has been a resident of Doylestown for 30 years, has ever proved alert to the needs of her county, state and country, can be emphasized in her past achievements. During the World War she served as chairman of the Home Service Commission of the Doylestown Branch of the American Red Cross, was a producer on Liberty Loan Drives, and has been a member of the Board of Health of Doylestown for 12 years, serving as its President for the past five years and further, was very active in Emergency Relief Work.

Mrs. Martin’s Republican predecessors in office were all accorded a second term without contest, which together with the fact she gave unsparingly of her time in the conscientious administration of the duties of the office, secured for her the endorsement of the Republican Harmony Primary Campaign Committee.

HELD FOR COURT TRIAL ON MURDER ATTEMPT

Pamel Slovo Must Stand
Trial for Alleged Cutting of Wife’s Throat

ADMITS DOING IT

“Sure I did,” mumbled Pamel (or Pample) Slovo, last night, in answer to the question: “Did you cut your wife’s throat?”

Slovo was brought back from Doylestown yesterday where he has been confined in the Bucks County prison since August 27th. He was given a hearing last night in Municipal Court here before Justice of Peace James Guy, on the charges of assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery and attempt to kill. He was held in $1,000 bail for trial at court.

The first witness last night was Mrs. Slovo whose throat is still bandaged as the result of the wound inflicted on the morning of August 26th, when her husband is alleged to have slashed her with a bread knife.

Mrs. Slovo told Judge Guy that her husband kissed her goodby as she stood at the kitchen sink in the home of Arthur Ludwig, 641 New Buckley street, washing dishes. “Mrs. Ludwig was out in the shed washing clothes,” stated the witness.

The witness said she and her husband had been joking and that he then suddenly turned around, grabbed the bread-knife off the table and cut her throat. The couple had been happy over the week-end as they visited their friends, the Ludwig family. Mr. and Mrs. Slovo reside at 625 North Marshall street, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Ludwig when called to the stand told how she was washing in the shed adjoining the kitchen when she heard Mrs. Slovo say “What are you trying to do?”

“Then I heard a scream,” said the witness and “a sound like a choking sound.”

Mrs. Ludwig told of running into the kitchen and seeing Slovo lower his knife.

WATCH YOUR STEP

“Beware of the misrepresentations and false statements of the backers of a constitutional convention. Those who would scrap our State constitution will use every means to gain their ends. Vote on September 17th against a constitutional convention and protect our State, our homes, and our children from the ‘wolves in sheep’s clothing.’”—J. A. Boak, Master of Pennsylvania State Grange.

EDDINGTON MAN FATALLY HURT WHEN AUTO STRIKES POLE AT ANDALUSIA; BRISTOLIAN AND ONE OTHER INJURED

Frank Wagner, 61, Dies En Route to Hospital — James F. Lawler, Bristol; Joseph Faulkner, Andalusia, Driver, Given Treatment—Trio Was Returning From Employees’ Meeting in Philadelphia

An Eddington man was killed, and two other young men, one a Bristol resident, injured early this morning when the automobile in which they were riding struck a pole at Andalusia, and turned over several times.

The dead:
Frank Wagner, 61, Eddington.

Injured:
James F. Lawler, 27, 591 Bath street, Bristol, son of William Lawler.

Joseph Faulkner, 19, Andalusia.

The driver of the car was Faulkner, and the fatal accident occurred as the trio was returning from a meeting in Philadelphia. Faulkner, according to state highway patrolmen of South Langhorne barracks, was the driver of the machine. When the car reached the top of Red Lion Hill, Andalusia, it crashed into a pole at the side of the highway, and turned over several times, it is stated. The machine, a sedan, was the property of Faulkner’s father.

Wagner died en route to Frankford Hospital.

Lawler, who sustained lacerations of the head and leg, was treated at the same institution, and returned to his home.

Faulkner is still a patient at the Frankford Hospital, sustaining head injuries and lacerations of the hand.

The Philadelphia county coroner was called to view the body of Wagner.

Corporal Evans and Patrolman Butcavage investigated the case. Charges will be lodged against Faulkner later.

Wagner resided on the Bristol Pike at Eddington. He had been employed as meat cutter and manager of the meat department of the A. & P. store at Cornwells Heights for over a year. He was popular and familiarly known as “Pop” Wagner.

The deceased is survived by his wife, six daughters and three sons. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Charles Church, Cornwells Heights.

Faulkner was also employed by the A. & P. store at Cornwells Heights and resides with his parents in Andalusia.

The group along with others from various sections had been attending a meeting of A. & P. employees held in Philadelphia. They attended the meeting and then left for home, the case.

The car was wrecked.

National Convention Is Heard of By W. C. T. U.

At the Bristol W. C. T. U. meeting last evening at the home of Mrs. G. E. Coon, several members who had attended the Saturday and Sunday meetings of the National W. C. T. U. convention, being held in Atlantic City, N. J., gave reports. Visitors to the convention included: Mrs. A. B. Sands, Mrs. J. R. Hendricks, the Misses Jane Rogers, Eleanor Warner, and Martha C. Hughes.

The convention is being held in the ball-room of Convention Hall, with 1100 delegates representing every state in the union, Puerto Rico and the Philippine Islands.

Saturday afternoon and evening, it was reported, were devoted to the Young People’s Branch, with short speeches by Y. P. B. members, including Mrs. Mai Bai Wang, Shanghai, leader of the young people of China. Dr. Wilbur Saunders, headmaster of Peddie Institute, gave the address of the evening.

Sunday morning at 7:45 several hundred women gathered for an inspiring prayer meeting in the garden lounge of the Hotel Dennis, convention headquarters. The Sunday morning service was held in St. Paul’s M. E. Church, with national officers participating. Fifty women were speaking in nearby churches. On Sunday afternoon Senator Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota, in a masterly speech, charged that munitions interests whip up periodic wars for the benefit of their business, “with the effect that we have increased our budget for war preparations 197 per cent since the last conflict. We are spending more money for war today than any other nation.”

Miss Marie Watson will attend the state convention at Butler September 26th to 30th, as a delegate from Bristol.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Start New Highway

HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—Bucks County motorists traveling between Lahaska and Center Bridge were forced to detour today as workmen swung into action on the construction of five miles of bituminous surface highway between the two points. The highway is being constructed by the H. R. Miller Company of Lancaster at a cost of $81,769.29 in Federal funds. Traffic was being detoured over Route 32 via New Hope, the Department of Highways announced.

SMITH, BUSY TRACKMAN

SALEM, N. H., Sept. 11.—(INS)—Lou Smith, horse impresario, will soon have a chain of horse tracks that will keep him busy the year round.

Djibouti, Sept. 11.—Massacre of all whites in Ethiopia after war starts was the ominous forecast given would-be travelers in Addis Ababa today by representatives of the great powers here who foresee the Italo-Ethiopian conflict will become in the eyes of the Ethiopian savage tribes a war of all blacks against all whites. Officials pointed out the moment war begins, the railroad between Djibouti and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia’s only railway, will be cut off, leaving foreigners isolated in Ethiopia.

First news of invasion of their country by Italy will, in the opinion of the Military Corps here, so enrage the natives, it will be doubtful whether Emperor Haile Selassie will be able to control them. The feeling among the blacks and colored people all around Ethiopia from the Sudan through the three Somalilands to Kenya, is already keenly aroused in sympathy with the African nation.

FARMER LOOKS AT NUDISTS

If it would be good fortune for people to see themselves as others see them, some of the nudists of Long Valley, N. J., may well feel that Lady Luck is being kind to them indeed. For through the report by Farmer Searles of what he has seen from his land adjoining their colony, they can, if they wish, see themselves most plainly.

Mr. Searles visited his most critical criticism upon the ladies of too great poundage. He finds the spectacle of "a fat, pot-bellied woman cavorting around in the nude" anything but edifying. But he had no praise to bestow even upon those who were fair and neither fat nor forty. In his opinion they, too, would have looked "a lot better if they had their dresses on."

An enquiring reporter pressed questions upon Farmer Searles. "Don't you think," he asked, "that artists are correct when they paint beautiful women in the nude?"

"I think," came the reply, "that it's the artist that makes them look beautiful."

After that, it was evidently useless to pursue the argument. So there it remains, so far as higher art criticism from Long Valley is concerned.

But perhaps it will be revived. The nudist colony has brought charges of trespass against Searles. He in turn threatens to build a tower higher than any fence the nudists may attempt to build. All this, not to satisfy his curiosity or the curiosity of his neighbors, mind you, but to discourage the nudists.

NOT CHEERING

For motorists who never can be sure where their next gallon-of-gas tax pennies are coming from, a new report on the outlook for this country's future supply of gasoline is far from cheering.

Prepared for presentation before the American Chemical Association, this report says there is "abundant evidence" that the nation's supply of petroleum has now reached such a stage of depletion that "a marked increase in our imports and a considerable increase in the petroleum price structure" will be necessary "within five to eight years." Should the consumption increase, a shortage may develop "within two or three years."

Oil producers must be red in the face when they consider such news. But who can tell whether that color denotes a sense of shame at the manner in which they with others have wasted our national resources, or rather a sense of elation at the prospect of still greater riches from exploitation of oil?

Maybe the chemists, however, will yet forestall any selfish schemes and anticipations of the oil exploiters. The transmutation of energy is the true transmutation of gold for which the world now yearns.

The item that the Ethiopian tongue had used without profanity had us puzzled. Then it came to us—it is the Italian army that is importing Missouri Mules.

Always interesting to us is the woman's page article on "How to keep age lines from the neck," illustrated by photos of an 18-year-old movie deb.

The truth-in-advertising force announce a new victory. The customary fake funnels will be omitted from Britain's newest ocean liner.

Mrs. Charles Burke and Mrs. Herbert Burke, Valley Forge, were Tuesday visitors of Mrs. Amy O. Matlack.

WEST BRISTOL

The place of residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rivells has been changed from Third avenue to Maple Shade.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ferguson, Mayfair, passed Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bessinger.

The Ladies' Aid will hold its weekly meeting at the Newport Road Community Chapel tomorrow evening at 8. All interested women are invited to attend.

A surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Cyril Becker, Maple Shade, Saturday evening, in honor of her birthday. The group of friends who gathered enjoyed singing, dancing and a lunch. The one who was honored was presented with gifts. Those who gathered for the pleasing affair: Mr. and Mrs. Howard Yoder, Mrs. Jennie Altmeier, Mrs. Kate Danvers, Andrew Devers, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster and son Albert, Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver Bowers and son Elmer, Arthur Veit, Miss Margaret Wilson, Jack Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Becker and children Irene and John, Bristol Township; and Mr. and Mrs. Herron, Philadelphia. Music was provided by the Messrs. Albert Foster, Elmer Bowers and Arthur Veit.

KEPT STATE DEBT DOWN

Play safe against increasing the State's debt by $250,000,000 or more, by voting NO against holding a constitutional convention. Increasing the public debt, hence raising the taxes, was made the main issue by those sponsoring a constitutional convention.

A trip to Atlantic City, N. J., is being participated in today by Mrs. A. W. Mertz and her guest, Mrs. Eisenbraun, of Germany; Mrs. Elmer Morrow and Mrs. Smith, Maple Shade.

Visitors of Mrs. Edith Ghant recently were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Biffy, Philadelphia.

BABY CONSTRUCTOR

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — (INS)—Riding a bunch of bananas, a two-foot baby boa constrictor arrived at a local warehouse and was immediately presented, by careful handlers, to the Goddard Park Zoo. Zoo officials describe the newcomer as "very docile." In the course of time its two-feet will expand upwards to 15.

"CAST INTO EDEN"

BY HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XIX

Linda fell asleep. Jerome decided they were being shiftless and lazy in not making smoke signals from the high point of the island. After Papa Gorilla's first nocturnal visit they had not dared wander about and when they had established friendly relations a sort of sloth descended on them.

Then he began to wonder if it was entirely sloth. There was a fascination in their idleness, he told himself. But now as he faced the situation frankly this alibi did not ring true. It was something else. Another factor had become responsible for their acceptance of an isolation that alternated languor with such terrifying episodes as had just occurred.

They were beginning to like it. There was a poignant charm in their detachment from a world overcharged with vexations large and small. Not only had they both been sick and tired of the futile lives they had been leading but more recently harassed at the state of their family and personal affairs. Here on this island nothing mattered, so far as the outer world was concerned.

But this was not enough to satisfy Jerome's natural candor with himself. He knew that he had been leaving out the real reason for their content with conditions that would be terrible to almost any other young man and woman of their class.

They were falling in love with each other. Not in the usual more or less conventional way. Primitive impulses were growing in them. The isolation, return to absolute simplicity, sharing of danger that was terrifying and bizarre. Surmounting these dangers together had wrought a change in them. The civilized relationship was being laid aside and in its place was growing a sympathy that ignored social traditions.

That, Jerome told himself, was the danger here, and it must not occur. Sooner or later they must return to their former social lives, unless violently interrupted. Barring such violence, life here on the island was simple and natural. That of civilization had become like walking a slack wire—a constant effort at equilibrium.

The shadows began to deepen. Linda slept on. Jerome went to the cook house to prepare supper. There was no lack of quantity and variety of their wholesome tropic fare and he reflected that if this thing kept on much longer they would put on weight. Linda had complained that she was doing so, even worse she could not gauge the Rubenesque process without scales or clothes to warn her.

One thing was certain, she was getting sweeter and lovelier. The petulance had gone from her face, and its look of hard intolerance. Her long grey eyes, with their double fringe of lashes that were much darker than her hair, had lost their scornful mockery, and a nose that nature had tilted provocatively remained that way without an added aggravating slant. The boyish chin was merely firm and not defiant, and a mouth unshaped for sneers had discarded them to become smiling and seductive.

As he visualized the improvement in these several traits and turned his omelet he was horrified to hear a piercing scream. He rushed out in time to see the bowed and neckless back of the Racketeer bounding across the cleared space under the trees, making for the jungle. The mischievous ape clutched in one paw a fluttering pennant of white, and in the other a smaller one of pink.

It looked back with a derisive chatter, and at the same moment Linda burst into Jerome's field of vision in hot pursuit. She was armed with the stump of the broken oar, and all that she had on was the one stocking and her stylish shoes. But she was too angry and too desperate to care anything about that. A trail of abuse streamed out behind her.

"You miserable, sneaking monkey," she cried. "Drop it!"

"Cha-cha . . . chikoo . . . yah . . ."

about the Racketeer. The old man has kept him squelched and now he's tickled to find somebody he thinks he can bully. But it's a damn there are no firearms in these chests."

"Why so?" The old cordon painted leather had faded but was decorative.

"The Duono wouldn't be fool enough to leave firearms where anybody who might see fit to visit the island in his absence could get them. There are some bad hombres floating up and down this coast. Criminals and refugees and political fugitives."

"Well, there may be tools so that we can build a dug-out or something. I tell you, Jerry, that are going from bad to worse."

"I might make a raft of bamboo to float us across to the mainland. The prevailing wind is on the coast."

"Then let's get busy."

"Tomorrow. It's getting dark. He spoke reluctantly."

"You miserable, sneaking monkey . . ." Linda cried "Drop it!"

me but he pulled my hair. Get me a gun out of one of those moldy old crates. He's coming back pretty soon and then I'll fix him."

"Coming back . . ."

"Of course. Now that he's got an edge on us he means to be our prime pest."

"How has he got an edge on us?" Jerome asked.

"He knew he had us scared before Papa ran him up a tree. When he started to puff out his chest and beat it you should have thrown a big rock at him."

"No rocks there. . . ." Jerome had lain the pieces of fine soft leather on the table and was cutting out the thongs with which to fasten them together.

Linda went on: "Something's got to be done about him. Each fresh trick he gets away with will make him bolder. It's all honey that gorillas take no interest in females not of their species. He pulled my hair exactly like some fresh cub of a schoolboy, but harder. He'll be sneaking up and pinching me next."

Jerome tossed out the skirt he had extemporized. "Put that on. Yes, something's got to be done

"You don't seem so hot about it."

"I'm not. I hate to expose you to the hardship and danger of shoving off on a flimsy raft and landing heaven knows where or in the midst of whom. We might run into something worse than this bad actor of a cub gorilla."

"Is that all?" Linda asked.

"No." He gave her a level look. "You know how I feel about all this . . . and you. I don't want you to leave this Eden as the First Woman left hers. It's still a pretty tough world out there."

She stepped closer and laid her hand on his shoulder. "You are a good egg, Jerry. A stouter fella than I am."

"I love you, Linda."

"I know you do. So do I love you. Does anything else greatly matter?"

"A tremendous lot, and for that very reason. If we weren't both broke it would be different. I simply can't let you go back into the world mated to a pauper and with nothing sure ahead. We don't know what might happen."

"I understand, dear . . ."

LEATHER-PUSHERS WILL FIGHT HERE TONIGHT

Bristol amateur leather-pusher will be pitted against amateur fighters from the West Side and East Side Sporting Clubs, of Philadelphia, tonight in the St. Ann's outdoor arena, Wood and Franklin streets. The bouts were called off on three occasions because of rain.

Sammy Moffo, match-maker for the local organization, last night announced that two Bristol mittmen have withdrawn from the contest. Sammy Ross, one of the colored lads, injured his hand in a baseball game and it hasn't healed sufficiently to permit him to box. Donato Sciarras, who gave a wonderful exhibition against Harry DeFazio in the last bouts, claims that he isn't in condition enough to box on this card.

The remainder of the boxers with the addition of several others are ready and raring to go at the opening gong. Francis Wilson and Harry Davis, colored youths, appear in fine shape and went through four rounds of sparring last night. Wilson is a heavyweight while Davis will fight in the 140 pound class.

"Chet" Castor will be in the wind-up with Al Paris fighting in the semi-windup. Other Bristolians on the card are: Sammy Biocchi, Vince Della, Vichie Brushia, Johnny Raccagnio, and Mike Quici. Quici and Brushia are new-comers in the amateur ranks.

The West Side club will be represented by John Fietta, Joe Smith, John Sherman, Al Hall, Phil Foster, Tom Boylan, Tom Murphy, and Joe Williams. The East Side club will send here Harry DeFazio, George Flowers, Harry Greb, and Bob Quinn. These fighters are listed to appear here but may be changed at the last minute.

It is most likely that Johnny Sherman and George Flowers will be matched with local boys because of being in the amateur game for quite some time. However, Match-Maker Moffo will match them against one another and thus have a battle that has been in the making for several years. Flowers and Sherman have never mixed it together before although several clubs have tried to card them.

Tickets for the grandstand seats will go on sale at seven o'clock. The first bout will begin at 8:15, sharp.

YARDLEY BRUIANS ARE NOW BEING ORGANIZED

YARDLEY, Sept. 11.—The Yardley Bruins A. A. football team is organizing again this year under the leadership of George (Doc) Daugherty. The team last year won seven games, and lost four. It is looking forward to another successful season, and the manager is issuing a call for all players who wish to try out for the team. A coach is also needed, and anyone interested should get in touch with Daugherty on Harper avenue, Yardley. The team this year will be limited to 22 players and plans are now being arranged for several night games in Philadelphia.

ST. ANN'S ASSOCIATION SELECTS DOUGHERTY

"Bill" Dougherty, coach of the Bristol High School, last night was selected as coach of the St. Ann's Athletic Association by the athletic committee of the organization. Dougherty will begin his duties tomorrow night when he will call the football candidates out for practice.

All positions on the team are open and it is the hope of the St. Ann's organization to have the best eleven that has donned the Purple and Gold uniforms. The Saints will begin their gridiron season, September 22 or 23. Today members of the organization were working on the field, getting it in shape for the forthcoming season.

FAN RAZZES THOSE WHO DON'T SUPPORT GAMES

Editor Courier:

It may be that I am presuming to a large degree in asking that this misadventure be accorded publicity. If such be the case I am sorry.

The subject at hand is baseball in Bristol and its complete failure.

Briefly we have heard for years and years that there is no good reason why Bristol should not have a team. Memories have been recalled of the teams of years ago at Persimmon Park and Bloomsdale, etc., of their brilliant successes and their fame. Then down through the ensuing years we have occasionally found a representative Bristol team, inseparably linked with the names of Sullivan and Mulholland, but largely up to 1935 a void.

In June of this year the D. Landreth Seed Co. placed a team on the field. Time does not permit nor is it necessary to eulogize that team's success, its manager or its players. However the point we do wish to make is that every game at home, we understand, has been a colossal failure financially.

Why is this? Why is it that a man who can afford to pay will permit a team to pass without contributing something, no matter how little? The sporting public of Bristol is not and has not been bankrupt as recent events testify. Why is it that a man who can afford to do so will stand through nine innings when he can obtain a seat for a nominal charge? It just couldn't be that that man is cheap, could it? It just couldn't be that all this talk and argument, during the years gone by, that Bristol should have a representative team has been just talk with nothing behind it to back it up? No, we feel that such thoughts on our part are repulsive and in terribly bad taste and we realize that the so-called sporting public of Bristol agrees with us and is repulsed, rebuked and highly indignant that anyone should even think such a thing, let alone write it. And yet, the amusing part of the whole situation is that it is the truth.

Having been in the red after each home game played thus far it is only logical and consistent that we predict additional financial failures in the remaining home games.

We suspect that we are becoming bolder and test we seem unkind and overstep the bounds of propriety we will take leave with the expression of our hope that the baseball fans of Bristol are satisfied with themselves.

We remain (having a strange interlude—what non-de-plume shall we use?)

A FAN WHO HELPS OUT!

BUCKS COUNTIANS PLAY IN WILDWOOD TOURNEY

YARDLEY, Sept. 11.—Joe Brennan, pro at the Langhorne Country Club, tied with George Smith, Philadelphia Country Club, for first place in the Wildwood Open Golf Championship, played Saturday and Sunday. They each carded 287 for the 72 holes. The play-off for the first place, and the $250 prize will be played later, possibly this week-end. Second place money is $125.

Al E. MacDonald, Yardley Country Club pro, turned in a score of 292 to win 5th place, and $30. The only other local entrant to finish high in the list was Ivan (Chick) Bash, amateur from the Yardley Country Club, who placed fourth in the amateur division with a score of 314.

MacDonald entered a protest on George Smith, declaring to the committee that the Philadelphia pro, in removing his ball from a lake on the 10th hole, had placed it 15 to 20 yards nearer the hole and should be disqualified. The committee decided, however, that Smith's action was correct, and the contest ended in a tie for first place.

Held For Court Trial On Murder Attempt

arm and draw the bread knife away from his wife's throat.

"I pushed her out and yelled for help," said Mrs. Ludwig.

According to the witness the couple had not been arguing.

The Ludwig dog jumped at Slovsio and was covered with blood streaming from the wound he had inflicted on his wife.

Chief Jones related receiving the call on August 26th at 10 a. m., and stated that when he questioned Slovsio he had admitted cutting his wife's throat but said that he did it in self defense.

"The wound was six inches long and required 15 stitches," testified the police official.

Chief Jones endeavored to question Slovsio and to get intelligent answers as a matter of record.

"Do you like your wife?" the chief asked the defendant.

"I don't know," was the mumbled answer.

Then in answer to other questions Slovsio answered "I don't say nothing."

Revision Advocates Are Not Agreeing

strength and number, while at the same time many patriotic and fraternal organizations, concerned primarily with maintaining the integrity of the Federal and State Constitutions, likewise have taken up the cudgels against a Convention and a new Constitution at this time, or for the purposes which are described as the chief objectives of the sponsors.

The result has been two-fold—a pronounced public opposition to Revision, which, according to many Statewide organizations having their headquarters here, rapidly is sweeping the entire State and embracing people in all walks of life in both major political parties; and a corresponding disappearance of harmony among those who, a week or so ago, gleefully considered that they had a new Constitution "in the bag."

In the Earle-Margiotti camp, mutual good will is reported to be crumbling rapidly under the bitter recriminations of those who are accusing each other of having been too voluble and candid about what they were going to do when they got down to the actual business of dictating what a new Constitution should toss overboard in the way of time-tried principles, and what it should introduce in the way of experiment and innovation. In the State capital there is amusement and increasing significance in this back-passing among those who, publicly, are consecrated heart and soul to "the interests of the average citizen."

As for rapidly-spreading public opposition, it apparently springs from many causes—all of them among the purposes that have been avowed at one time or another by those who are advocating Revision, and who seem to have a supreme certainty that they will determine just what kind of a Revision it will be, the only hitch being to procure a majority vote for a Constitutional Convention in next Tuesday's Primary.

Farmers throughout the State are reported to be opposed bitterly and almost unanimously, to what originally was one of the principle selling arguments of the Revisionists, namely, the enactment into the fundamental law of Pennsylvania of the Federal "New Deal."

In the first place, they believe, in natural laws, and almost to a man and woman they are reported to look only with revulsion upon the deliberate waste and calculated destruction of the necessities of life. Further, they are fed up with taxes and restrictions which have been imposed upon them, in order that huge subsidies might be conferred upon their competitors in other States.

As lifelong individualists, the farm people of Pennsylvania believe that the most important underlying principle of a Constitution, as understood in this country, is that of reserving to the people all of the rights and powers which must not, for the common good, be given to the State and Federal Governments; and they are reported to be almost unitedly against the complete centralization of power and authority in Harrisburg, as planned by the advocates of a new Constitution.

The latest manifestation of the "New Deal" in Washington is the Potato Control Law, under which a farmer cannot raise enough potatoes even to feed his own family without special permission of some governmental bureau. Most farmers regard this latest edict of the "New Deal" as being obviously in conflict with the Federal Constitution, and there is open rebellion against it. Naturally they turn their backs upon those who frankly say they would incorporate the impractical and unworkable expedients of the "New Deal" into the organic law of this State.

They take common ground with their county neighbors in boroughs, towns and the smaller cities, in resisting the further proposal of the Revisions to include in the new and enlarged powers that would be centered in Harrisburg, that of revamping and reorganize both the character and physical limits of existing local political units. They regard that as an alien proposal, in absolute conflict with home rule as now carried out in the local political units by local governments elected by the people of those districts and responsible only to the people of those districts.

Apparently there is increasing suspicion of an Administration which seeks a new Constitution in order to abolish the State Senate, because that Senate, with a Republican majority, saved the people $75,000,000 by lopping that much off the Earle demand for more than $200,000,000 of new taxes. And the memory of that added tax load, created within the present year, has made it pretty difficult for Governor Earle to look real in his role of tax-reducer under a new Constitution.

But probably the greatest obstacle the advocates of a new Constitution created for themselves has to do with the State's credit and borrowing power. The Legislature, in the law which provides for a vote on Revision in Tuesday's Primary, specified that the borrowing power under a new Constitution should not exceed $50,000,000. Governor Earle has repeatedly referred to any such limitation as "vicious," and other members of his Administration have declared defiance of the Legislature and said frankly that if they can obtain approval for Revision, they will not be bound by the Act under which the Convention would be called.

These opinions and threats have been expressed so often that the advocates of a "New Deal" Constitution no longer deny that they want a "no limit" play on the public credit, or a limit so elastic as practically to amount to that. But the public generally has come to know that borrowed money must be repaid with higher taxes, and the opponents of Revision predict that fear of this feature alone will lead to an avalanche of "No's" on Tuesday sufficient to defeat the proposal.

OPPOSITION INCREASES

Opposition is swelling daily throughout the State against holding a constitutional convention because of a growing fear of their tendency toward destruction of fundamental principles on the part of those who favor it and the lack of any constructive thought in their program.
